As we come to the end of our Christian Formation and Congregational Life season, I am humbled with a deep gratitude for the wisdom and light that has been reflected in our many offerings this year. In my participation in the adult seminar series, Sunday school classrooms, worship offerings, confirmation, and youth ministry, I have witnessed the incarnation of our risen Lord through the members of this congregation. I have been blessed to experience the many ways our members, of all ages, bring all that they have to worship God and serve one another. Our Sunday school teachers have planned creative lessons that bring scripture into a personal context through crafts, play, music, and discussion. Our Christian Education Council and Congregational Life Council are working hard to plan new programs that invite our members and guests into active fellowship. Those who attended worship services through Holy Week heard of the news of the recent death of Ann Weems, a ‘poet laureate’ of the Presbyterian Church USA. She passed away on March 17th due to complications from a brain tumor. In 2003 Ann was hosted by Second Presbyterian, and gave a lecture, sharing some of her work, including this poem, appropriate for Eastertide.

New Shoots

Born in the light of the Bright and Morning Star, we are new.
Not patched, not mended... but new like a newborn...
like the morning...
The guilt-blotched yesterdays are gone; the soul stains are no more!
There is no looking back; there are no regrets.
In our newness we are free.
In the power of God’s continuing creation, we are new songs breaking through the world’s deafness.
This then is a new day.
New shoots, new branches, new songs, new day...
Bathed in the promise of God’s New Creation, we begin!

Session Highlights
February 16, 2016

Moderator Rev. Dr. Thomas W. Blair called the Stated Meeting of Session of the Second Presbyterian Church, Baltimore, to order on February 16 and welcomed new Elders Ray Herman and Michael Johnston to the Session. He thanked Andrew Birmingham and Geoffrey Hardin for their dedicated service and contributions; they will be stepping down to pursue other ministries at Second Presbyterian.

Rev. Blair, noting that this meeting was a transitional one, had Elders and Elders-elect divide into two groups to share their experiences while serving on the Session. Elders engaged in wide-ranging discussions, including how the session has become more cohesive, no longer holds discussions that re-hash what we already know, and has made an increased level of trustee reporting a priority. Elders concluded that although we disagree from time to time, once we make a decision, we respect it.

Dr. Blair introduced Beth Heizer of InSpirit Counseling Services to the Session. Second Presbyterian has partnered with InSpirit Counseling Services (formerly Counseling Services of Maryland) and Elizabeth (Beth) Ann Heizer, resident counselor, who moved her office to Second Presbyterian’s Counseling Center in early February.

InSpirit has about 30 counselors located at various churches throughout Baltimore and the surrounding area. Beth specializes in adult therapy, crisis counseling, and drug and alcohol addiction. As a Sister of Mercy, Ms. Heizer has taken a vow of service. She currently has about 13 clients and will be working at Second Presbyterian’s Counseling Center’s facilities five days per week. Ms. Heizer noted that Second Presbyterian’s relationship with InSpirit is quite strong.

Amy Carlson, Director of Christian Formation and Congregational Life, and Session will be teaming up to host a pot-luck dinner for the confirmands in early April. Amy has found that confirmands, while eating together, are eager to join in on the conversation about how they have grown in their faith during their confirmation class. The pot-luck dinner that Session will be putting on for the confirmands will be part of our having an informal conversation about their faith, membership, and what their faith journey has been like for them.

Dr. Blair and Rev. DiFrancesco reviewed the Pastoral Care and Concerns list before closing the meeting with prayer.

special programs like Compline, The Easter Egg Hunt/Brunch, and Zoo Trip to life. While it may often go without saying, take it from someone who is new to this community, this kind of passionate leadership truly is a rare gift for which we are all thankful.

    I have been especially grateful this year to journey with our confirmands through their confirmation experience. Together we have explored what we believe and how our faith calls us to be disciples and members of this church and the world. We have engaged some challenging questions about God and the realities of our contemporary culture. Our youth have thoughtfully expressed their own questioning of where God is in suffering, war, worship, and scripture. I have also had the joy of attending many of their events outside the walls of our church such as musicals, sports, plays, and even synchronized swimming! We as a congregation should be proud of their devotion, dedication, and loyalty to becoming active members of Second Presbyterian Church and serving as disciples out in the community. I hope you will join us on May 1st as we celebrate Confirmation Sunday and Banner Day!

~Amy Carlson
Abandoned rowhouses have become the dominant rhetorical image symbolizing all that is wrong in Baltimore. Whether it is national media coverage related to the Freddy Gray case, or TV ads for mayoral candidates, the images—and the poverty, crime and hopelessness that they connote—are hard to escape. Just driving many areas in the city that are east or west of the central core or outside of areas immediately surrounding the harbor, only serves to confirm this reality.

Restoring such rowhouses to livable homes and building new homes on vacant lots can be a powerful symbol of hope in a neighborhood. That hope is coming to the McCabe-Woodbourne community on the east side of York Road through a partnership between Habitat for Humanity Chesapeake and the Baltimore Presbytery’s Uptown Metro Ministry. But the hope being created goes well beyond just the buildings.

The Uptown Metro Ministry, one of six regional ministry groups within our Presbytery of which Second is a member, has been involved with the McCabe neighborhood through a partnership with Habitat since 2012. McCabe represents a shift in tactics for Habitat from focusing on single properties scattered across the city to rehabbing multiple properties in a single neighborhood. Presbytery grant funds ($40,000), Uptown Ministry group funds ($24,000) and gifts from congregations ($24,000), together with scores of volunteers are making a palpable difference in the community.

Driving along the one-way McCabe Avenue, which runs parallel and a few blocks south of Woodbourne Avenue towards York Road, one sees many homes in varying stages of reconstruction and a few brand new homes. Not all, but many of the existing occupied homes look neat and fairly well maintained.

From the start, the Uptown Ministry group’s goal was to “have a deeper engagement with this neighborhood in ways that would empower and support their work of renewal and transformation.” Rev. Jenn DiFrancesco, in an article last summer for the Baltimore Presbytery, talked about the community’s “hidden wealth”—the assets that lie in its “individuals, associations, institutions, buildings, grounds and community partnerships already present.” Uptown Ministry realized its goal by partnering with Strong City Baltimore (formerly the Greater Homewood Community Corporation) to fund a community organizer. Christian Hall, who had worked as an Americorps Vista volunteer for two years with Habitat for Humanity Chesapeake is no stranger to the Woodbourne-McCabe community. He began last summer working with current and potential leaders in the community to help them become an effective and cohesive group.

Before describing the transformation that is beginning to take place, it is helpful to understand a little about the community. Woodbourne-McCabe is a relatively poor African-American community located along the historical York Road divide that separates white and black communities. This division began in the early 1900s with the rise of covenant communities, in particular Roland Park, Guilford and Homeland. The Roland Park Company that developed these communities had covenants that prevented African Americans, Jews and other “undesirables” from buying homes in these communities. Whites selling homes were also prohibited from selling to these groups. An important, but less well known fact is that Federal government lending policies supported these discriminatory covenants. Today, communities west of York Road are 80 to 100 percent white, while communities on the east side are 80 to 100 percent black. Sadly, this pattern of discrimination in housing lending didn’t end with the 1964 Civil Rights Act. The high cost sub-prime mortgage loans that companies like Wells Fargo targeted to poor black communities in the 2000s followed the same pattern as earlier Federal government backed loans.

In his work based on asset-based models of community development that Strong City Baltimore have found to be effective, Christian is working closely with community leaders, old and new, in making connections to the assets that already exist within their community. These include individuals who are motivated to become engaged; associations like the York Road Partnership that brings together communities on both sides of the York Road divide; and institutions like churches and nearby universities. By contrast, a deficit-based model focuses solely on problems within the community that can leave residents feeling overwhelmed and unable to effect change. The tools of transformation include community service, advocacy, activism and community organization.

Phyllis Gilmore, who recently spoke at Second during a “Minute for Mission,” is an inspiring example of the transformation that can take place. Phyllis was moved to action just last spring when her grandson was struck and injured by a speeding car on her street. She joined the Woodbourne-McCabe Neighborhood Association and shortly thereafter became its Vice President. Working together
Read Presbyterians Today's new blog: One Church, Many Voices

Presbyterians Today, an award-winning, general-interest magazine of the PC(USA), has recently launched a blog for everyday Presbyterians to talk honestly about the future of the church. Presbyterians of all stripes are welcome to share their ideas and their passions—all aimed at shining a light on the path to become better disciples of Jesus Christ. This blog is a safe and holy place for reflection and growth. You’ll find writing, art, videos, and podcasts. Some are collaborative projects inviting grassroots voices to speak lovingly but honestly on difficult topics of disagreement. Much of it pushes the boundaries of what passes for conversation in the church and will, we hope, inspire us to dream bigger when it comes to the gospel. Some pieces will no doubt have you nodding vigorously in agreement, while others may make you squirm a little or even get you a bit hot under the collar.

with the neighborhood association president, and Christian Hall, she succeeded in getting the City to install speed humps on McCabe Avenue—something the community had been pressuring the Department of Transportation for many years without success. But she didn’t stop there. She has begun a determined campaign to make her neighborhood safer and cleaner and, in particular, to help the community’s children. She is on first name basis with the 311 city service-line operators to deal with trash, dumping, overgrown lots and vacant houses. She also cajoles area businesses and residents to maintain their properties. In a very short period of time she organized a back-to-school event for August’s National Night Out, a community Harvest Festival in October, and a Christmas gift drive for students at the local Walter P. Carter Elementary School in December.

Current initiatives in the community include encouraging people to leave their porch lights on at night to deter crime and make the neighborhood more welcoming, establishing a community vegetable garden in a park space in the middle of the community, and building rat bait boxes. Larger problems of unemployment, poor education, and illegal drugs remain, but a spark of hope is growing. For Phyllis, just knowing that she has made a difference brought tears to her eyes and joy to her heart. She has a vision and a plan to continue moving the community towards positive things, and has no plans to slow down. Her favorite saying is “keeping the focus.”

The Book of Unknown Americans

Wednesday, April 20, 7 pm, Westcott Rm.

During Lent, a group came together and studied immigration through both a biblical and policy sense. At the end of the study together, some wanted to talk more and invite others into the conversation. On April 20th at 7pm, in the Westcott Room, you are invited to join an informal book study on “The Book of Unknown Americans: A novel” by Cristina Henriquez. This 2014 novel is set in Delaware and tells the story of several Latin American immigrants and their families. “A dazzling, heartbreaking page-turner destined for breakout status: a novel that gives voice to millions of Americans as it tells the story of the love between a Panamanian boy and a Mexican girl: teenagers living in an apartment block of immigrant families like their own.”

“We’re the unknown Americans, the ones no one even wants to know, because they’ve been told they’re supposed to be scared of us and because maybe if they did take the time to get to know us, they might realize that we’re not that bad, maybe even that we’re a lot like them. And who would they hate then?” — Cristina Henriquez

Collecting LEGOs for an AfterSchool Program and Summer Camp

In 2014 volunteers from Dickey Memorial Presbyterian Church started working with a group of 1st and 2nd graders from Dickey Hill Elementary Middle School with the intent to follow them all the way through 8th grade. The Tuesday after school program was such a success that we partnered with the Center for a week of summer camp in 2015. At the end of camp, parents asked if the church could do it for longer in 2016. So in addition to the after school program with these kids who are now in 2nd and 3rd grade, DMPC are taking on two weeks of camp this coming summer. They discovered that the kids love Legos, and that Lego projects are great for teaching STEM concepts and for building teamwork and leadership skills.

To help support the wonderful work of Dickey Memorial, we are collecting new and used Legos during the month of April to be used this summer and with the after school program next year. And if you’re interested in volunteering on a Tuesday afternoon during the year or over the summer, please contact The Rev. Jennifer Barchi – dmmpcpastor@gmail.com.

BoxTop Collections Continue

During February and March, Second Presbyterian Church collected over 600 BoxTops. THANK YOU!! We beat the Baptists and discovered that you are great at collecting and bringing the boxtops to the church, so we are extending our collection. You can find the collection box to deposit your few or stash by the glass doors. Thanks for continuing to clip them for one of our neighborhood schools.

A Report from the Trustees

Dear Fellow Members of Second Presbyterian Church,

As we look forward to warmer weather, the Trustees would like to share with you several upcoming projects that will have a positive impact on our building.

As you may be aware, at the annual meeting we presented several pressing maintenance items that we were hoping to address this coming spring and summer. The items included exterior painting and repairs to masonry and stonework around the church. I’m happy to report that we are moving forward with this work, and it should be completed no later than this coming fall. For those of you who missed the annual meeting, we would like to provide you with a quick description of the repairs.

PAINTING
As many of you may be aware, the entry to the Sanctuary is in desperate need of painting and maintenance to the woodwork the paint is protecting. Paint, as you may or not be aware, is not just about beauty; it also acts to protect the material it covers.

EXTERIOR MASONRY REPAIRS
Our church building is quickly approaching its centennial (2025) and several areas of the building constructed between 1924 and 1925 are in need of major repair. As you can see from the picture below, we have extensive discoloration of the brick chimney and façade off of Charlcote Rd. This discoloration is a sign of significant water infiltration and needs to be addressed now in order to ward off future problems that will be significantly more costly in the future. Unfortunately this repair work is more complex than painting and is not easily accessible. As a result, extensive scaffolding will be required to complete the work and will be in place for several weeks.

The general scope of the work needed will include the removal and replacement of the mortar between the brick and resetting/replacing parts of the stone chimney cap. When the work is completed, this area of our church should be stabilized for many years to come and we will shift our focus to other areas of the building.
Entry Stonework
As noted above, our building is starting to show its age and many of our church entrances are experiencing deterioration of the steps which has become a significant safety concern. Water penetration and subsequent freezing and thawing is again the culprit and will be addressed as part of this work.

The general scope of this work will be to remove and reset the steps where possible and replace the ones too far gone for saving. New sealants and joints will also be installed in an effort to keep the water out and the steps stable.

So…I’m sure by now you’re thinking “what will this all cost?” unfortunately we have to report this work is not inexpensive. In keeping with good practice, we solicited multiple bids for both the painting and masonry/stonework, evaluated the experience of the contracting companies as well as the cost they proposed. After reviewing all the proposals, the Trustees awarded the following contractors the work:

- Painting: Siskos Painting Company ................................ $18,500
- Masonry & Stonework: Coastal Exteriors LLC............... $97,026

Finally, while the exact schedule of the work has not yet been fully established, the work is being coordinated with Church Staff to minimize the impact and disruption to us all. We will continue to keep you up to date and informed as the work nears and construction begins.

We hope you find this report informative and please feel free to reach out to the Trustees with any questions or concerns you may have. This is good work that needs to be done.

Peace to you all,

Paul L. Hume
President, Second Presbyterian Trustees
